Dear Sarah:

Thank you for reaching out to us. I was traveling when this came in but I was glad to see this today and to learn a little of your work in supporting rural communities.

As a quick response, we really value rural Canada and rural Canadians. In many ways, rural Canadian communities have been the foundation of Canada's growth.

We support the family farm, responsible resource development, and appropriate infrastructure cooperation in respect of the huge contributions made by rural communities which provide jobs, food, stable communities, resources and resource revenues. Transportation corridors allowing for the moving of agriculture and resource products must be maintained. Hospitals, clinics and schools in rural communities are essential. We oppose foreign purchase of farmland and resource industries and all industry should have local employment as part of its vision.

We will further develop policies in support of rural communities. The value they contribute to Canada both economically and socially cannot be overstated.

Thank you once again. Please stay in touch and keep us aware of issues that may arise affecting rural Canada to which we should respond.

Sincerely,
Rod Taylor
